

TEEAL Graduate Student Research Paper Competition 2011

The TEEAL Project at Cornell University's Mann Library announces the first research paper competition for post graduate students from African universities eligible to obtain TEEAL, The Essential Electronic Agricultural Library.

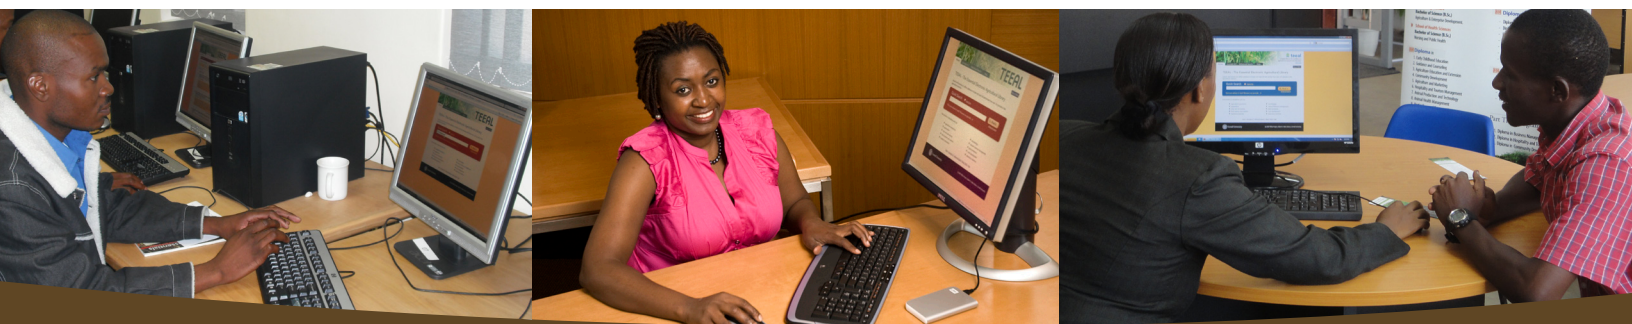

TEEAL invites MSc and PhD students to submit research papers in food production, food security, agricultural and food policy, and rural development.

AWARDS:

- Best research paper by a PhD student – first prize $1000 and second prize $500
- Best research paper by an MSc student – first prize $500 and second prize $250

- NO Entry Fee. Free registration
- Cash awards for best papers

- Winners will be featured on the TEEAL website hosted at Cornell University
- Each winner will receive a certificate, letter of accomplishment and plaque
- The winning papers will be published on the TEEAL website

Deadline for Free Registration: May 31st, 2011. To participate in the competition, visit <http://www.teeal.org/teaching-and-learning/contest> or email teeal@cornell.edu for more details.